Coming home:

Already, thoughts on the home front were turning Thursday to reunions and parades as thousands of Americans prepared the biggest party in decades to welcome back victorious U.S. troops.

Dianne Maley of Operation Orange Ribbon in Cincinnati said, "We're going to have the biggest party you've ever seen."

Vietnam veteran Kris Tourtellotte through his "Operation Welcome Home," hopes to decorate the airport, bus station, train station and the homes of soldiers from Rochester, N.Y. "No matter where they look, they're going to see 'welcome home,'" he said.

Flights resuming:

The cease-fire in the Persian Gulf War prompted some airlines to announce Thursday they would resume flights to the Middle East.

Airlines suspended most service to the region after the war began Jan. 17. Some, fearing terrorism, interrupted service even earlier in the crisis.

The airlines said war damage to airports in Baghdad and Kuwait City would delay resumption of flights to those capitals.

War costs estimated:

Congress will trim several billion dollars from President Bush's request for $15 billion to finance the Persian Gulf War, Democratic and Republican lawmakers said Thursday, citing the rapid allied victory.

It is estimated that if combat ended for good this week, the price tag for the conflict since Oct. 1 would be about $45 billion.

The United States might foot little, perhaps none, of the war bill if allied countries deliver aid they have promised. To date, the allies have pledged $53.5 billion in assistance, although only $14.9 billion of that amount has been received.

Damages to be seen:

Kuwait's ambassador to the United States invited members of Congress on a "freedom flight" to visit his war-torn country next week.

"They will be able to witness firsthand the devastation," Ambassador Saud Nasir Al-Sabah said Thursday. "We hope many will be able to attend."

Al-Sabah said his country has a "deep appreciation" for the support of Congress, President Bush and the allied forces in liberating his country.

The ambassador said he will be giving oil contracts — estimated to total nearly $100 billion — to the countries that gave the most to Operation Desert Storm: the United States, Britain and France.

Baby boom:

A pregnant Coolville, O. Army reservist said she was sent home three days before the Iraqi Scud missile attack that killed 28 people on the barracks where she was staying in Dharhan, Saudi Arabia.

First Lt. Shirley Cox, 27, of the 383rd Quartermaster Rear Detachment, said she lived and worked in the barracks for three months.

She said she discovered that she was pregnant in late January but didn't want to leave Saudi Arabia. She was sent home Friday after her superiors learned about her condition.

Iraq-U.S. talks slated

Fighting finished, but war's end not official

by Terence Hunt
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — One day after halting the war, President Bush announced Thursday Iraq had promptly agreed to talks on a permanent cease-fire and the return of prisoners of war.

"We are going to get back our POWs and we're going to do it fast," Bush declared.

The administration said Secretary of State James Baker will fly to the Middle East next week to begin charting the postwar future of the Persian Gulf. He will stop in Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Syria and Israel, as well as Turkey.

Baker will also go to the Soviet Union.

As long as Saddam Hussein remains in power in Iraq, the administration will urge the U.N. Security Council to maintain a ban on all weapon shipments to that nation, officials said.

Bush met with the ambassador of newly liberated Kuwait. He then went to the Rose Garden to announce Iraq's willingness to discuss peace terms set out Wednesday night in his announcement of a conditional cease-fire.

Bush said Baghdad had taken a first step by agreeing to name military commanders to talk with U.S.-led allies about battlefield arrangements to make the pause in fighting permanent. "We will go promptly back to them with the arrangements," Bush said. He said the meeting will take place very soon.

The return of POWs and seized Kuwaitis will be a primary sub-

Ethics hearings concluded

Senate committee judges Keating Five to be 'improper'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Its immediate focus was upon the Keating Five, but the Senate Ethics Committee took at least passing aim at a broader problem: the political money chase that also puts pressure on the Other 95.

The savings and loan scandal has effectively ended the career of one senator, and tarnished those of four others. It also has spurred calls for the broadest campaign finance reforms since Watergate.

"The old way of doing business is no longer acceptable," said Tom Mann, director of the governmental studies program at Brookings Institution.

And the old way, for most incumbents, involves an unrelenting quest for money to finance reelection campaigns that cost millions.

It comes down to this: a Senate term is about 2,190 days in length. For their 1990 campaigns, 17 senators raised more than $2.2 million. That averages out to raising money at a rate of more than $1,000 a day for six years.

It was in that atmosphere S&L operator Charles H. Keating Jr. used political contributions to develop ties to the senators who became known as the Keating Five.

Keating and his associates donated $1.3 million to the campaigns and political causes of the five senators, most of it while the Federal Home Loan Bank Board was conducting its examination of Keating's now-failed Lincoln Savings and Loan of Irvine, Calif.

After long hearings and closed-door debate, the Ethics Committee issued a report Wednesday that said it found "substantial credible evidence" that Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., committed major ethical violations. The panel thereby set the state for possible censure of Cranston, who recently underwent therapy for prostate cancer and already has announced he won't run again in 1992.

The other four senators — Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., John McCain, R-Ariz., John Glenn, D-Ohio, and Donald Riegle, D-Mich. — escaped with little more than a slap on the wrist.

DeConcini and Riegle "gave the impression of being improper" in their dealings with bank regulators, said the Ethics panel.

Glenn and McCain were chided for "poor judgment."

Health plan for grad students suggested

by Jeremy Stone Weber
staff writer

Graduate Student Senate is stepping up its efforts to provide health care to all University graduate students, despite the administration's belief that such a plan is fiscally impossible.

GSS President Wayne Berman said the senate's welfare committee is working with Graduate College Dean Louis Katzner to develop a plan which would cover all graduate students. This follows a Feb. 8 GSS resolution reaffirming the right for all graduate students to have health insurance.

Berman said the committee and Katzner are still in the initial stages of planning a coverage proposal.

"We're looking at several options and closing in on which looks best," Berman said. "The real problem will be coming up with a practical way to phase in the plan."

One possibility would be developing a policy which would cover only graduate assistants, Katzner said.

"The issues are very complicated and unfortunately we're doing this in an environment in which the budget picture is very clouded," he said. "We're in the earliest stages of trying to figure out what to do."

University President Paul Olscamp said he does not believe a fiscally sound health insurance policy can be developed, considering the University's current financial crunch.

Where's The Fire?

Employees and visitors re-enter the Administration Building Thursday morning after waiting out a false fire alarm for 10-15 minutes. According to the University's public relations department, the fire alarm was due to a malfunction, perhaps triggered by an electrical surge.

Unpaid bills affect credit of students

by Thomas W. Kelsey
staff writer

Skipping out on off-campus housing bills or dodging student loan payments after graduation can have a serious effect on future credit ratings, according to a local collection agency manager and a representative of the Ohio Student Loan Commission.

Ed Hanlon, vice president/general manager of the Credit Bureau of Toledo, warns students to pay off bills or face a potentially bad credit rating for up to seven years, no matter where they reside.

"If a student is legally responsible for a [financial obligation], it can become a part of their credit record," he said. "It's possible [the debt] can follow them to any community they choose to settle in."

Hanlon said a bad credit rating begins with a landlord or utility company "selling" a negligent consumer's account to a local credit bureau.

By employing a computer-networking system, the account

Ohio's judiciary system distorted

Larry Brown is the type of reformed criminal the Ohio penitentiary system should be proud to brag about. After having an extensive record of writing bad checks, theft and fraud, Brown was paroled in 1989.

Yet, now because of a legal snafu the Ohio courts are thinking of sending Larry Brown back to a prison cell, because of a technical glitch in judicial jurisdiction.

Brown was shock paroled after serving nine years in prison. He was sentenced to 15-55 years in prison for using a stolen credit card. His past criminal history ensured the steep sentence, but Brown's behavior in prison caused Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge Norbert Nadel to release him early. Nadel believed Brown had served enough time for a fourth degree felony.

Since his parole, Brown has strived to become a "model" citizen. He is re-married and a salesperson for a robotics firm. He also is active in his community's foreign exchange program.

He also proved former Governor Dick Celeste wrong. Celeste refused to grant Brown clemency — even though the parole board at the time recommended a release by 4-3. Celeste believed Brown would return to a life of crime.

Celeste's recent pardonings of several death row inmates makes Brown's case seem oddly pathetic.

In any event, Brown does not know when the State's handcuffs will once again clasp around his wrists. He expects to return to Nadel's courtroom in a couple of weeks. In light of the recent problems of sentencing in the Ohio court system, Brown's plight seems to be a waste of the tax-payers money and Brown's peace of mind and personal freedom.

In a country based on the idea of contrition, Brown's case is more indicative of the snarled judicial process than anything else.

Sending Brown back to prison would be a case of double jeopardy. And it also would be pointless, given Brown's clean record since his release.

The cost of housing Brown in a state penitentiary would eat up more tax dollars. Brown could continue contributing tax dollars as a man currently earning an honest wage.

All too often once a person enters our nation's penal system, they become lost in the system, as well as a drain on it.

This is not Brown's case. He has in a way escaped the pitfalls of the system. And he has become a better citizen because of it. Is this how we reward reformed individuals in Ohio, by returning them to prison?

Discrimination still shows up on campus

I'm currently being disenrolled from Army ROTC because the Department of Defense became aware that I'm gay.

Though I received my commission as a second lieutenant in May, the Army has reduced my status to cadet due to my 'disqualifying factor,' which it discovered because I was completely honest during my background investigation last summer.

I thought that honesty and integrity were qualities the services value, but unless they revoke their policy, I will see my ROTC training and planned career in military intelligence vanish." by University graduate John S. Snyder III in a letter to the editor of Newsweek Feb. 18, 1991.

Mathinks students at the University are fighting the wrong war.

The recent flurry of letters to the editor printed in The News pertaining to homosexuality are mistimed and misdirected.

Chris Dare's thoughtless and impersonal comments were not worth the ink and effort to refute by anyone concerned with discrimination.

The battleground should have been last semester when my high school classmate John Snyder was prohibited to work for Army intelligence by the Department of Defense and the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

John's story seems unreal upon examination. While gutless and traitorous reserves deserted the U.S. Army when called up for duty last December, John was an individual who desired to serve his country to the extent of dying

God and Man at Bowling Green

by Scott Geringer

for it in the Persian Gulf. The Army said no.

Why? Ask a cadet in Bowling Green ROTC and you will receive no less than 20 reasons — off the record that is. Pentagon policy states no official is allowed to defend the gay and lesbian rule on record. The essence of the rule states "Homosexuality is incompatible with military service."

Meanwhile, John's dream of working in military intelligence is put off indefinitely as his pleas for acceptance in "the land of opportunity" are ignored.

What a shame. In high school,

John was a student leader participating in athletics, concert band, choir, student council and national honor society. He has the sharp mind that would be an asset to the intelligence sector of the Army.

The real tragedy is that he could have picked any profession and been an immediate success after college — but made the mistake of choosing the archaic U.S. Army.

ROTC has many virtues and has been unfairly criticized by crazed anti-establishment liberals. But even smash-mouth conservatives can see that this discrimination crap has got to stop.

We are talking about 10 percent of our population.

It is time for student leaders to start putting pressure on ROTC to change their policies. Although ROTC has no power to change Pentagon policy, the only forum in which improvements will be initiated are at the institutions of higher learning. Nationally, University ROTC provides more than 70 percent of new officers in the armed services.

The Pentagon will begin to change its policy when universities cut-off this supply of officers.

Quite simply, University leaders need to set a deadline for ROTC to change policy to include homosexuals. If ROTC fails to comply, the leaders should then prohibit ROTC from using University facilities on the Bowling Green campus.

There exists two obvious wrongs which ROTC exhibits that are inconsistent with the University and are grounds for this collective removal.

First, a campus should exist — in its simplest terms — to provide a platform for the free exchange of ideas. ROTC does not perpetuate this forum.

There are many thoughtful and intelligent ROTC cadets who are gagged by the Department of Defense on important social issues such as homophobia. Their beliefs must coincide with Defense Department beliefs or promotion is inhibited.

Second, discrimination should not be tolerated in any form at a university.

Isn't homophobia the moral equivalent of racism? And yet, if ROTC discriminated against blacks, they wouldn't last two minutes on this campus. There is a distinct double standard working here.

Remember, discrimination against homosexuals is not the same as personal distaste for homosexuality.

There is no way to explain away the prejudice in this country against gays. People like John lose jobs, promotions, homes and friends because of it. Answers to the cure of homophobia is to not expend our energy on lost causes such as Chris Dare, but to start working for worthy causes such as John Snyder.

LETTERS

Immorality and sexual preference are questioned

Editor The News:

In Wednesday's paper, Traci Squire wrote, "homosexual practices do not 'work' in the system." What system? If you asked the average southerner, in 1850, if the slaves should be freed, he might have responded, "No way! They just won't work in the system!"

She also stated homosexuals are immoral (I assume a Christian sense of morality) and that they are "committing some form of anti-Christian act by simply being themselves." Jesus talked about the immorality of fornication, which includes pre-marital sex. This would make many at this University immoral by your argument. Then one commandment is "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." So atheists, Muslims, Buddhists, and many others are "committing some form of anti-Christian act by simply being themselves." Do they deserve to be persecuted for this? I think not!

People deserve the right to live their life the way they choose, (as long as they don't infringe on other people's rights), without fear of being persecuted.

Traci also wrote "It seems as though all you gay-rights people can say whatever you want, but as soon as people have a different view they get ripped apart and told they are ignorant." Well, if someone said Democrats can run the country better than Republicans, I would say we have different views. However, if someone persecuted another for something such as their sex, race, religion, or sexual orientation, I would call them 'ignorant' or uneducated and would try to correct the injustice.

Students critical of patriotic items sold for profit

Editor The News:

We would like to express our concern regarding the apparent commercialization of the Persian Gulf War. While we do not discourage patriotism, we feel the need to question the integrity of a few of the companies producing Gulf War "memorabilia." Items falling into the category of "memorabilia" include: the Saddam Hussein concert T-shirts, Operation Desert Storm collectors cards and the Operation Desert Storm Dog Tags (the ones produced by a for-profit organization which sends no money to the troops).

We feel such commercialization has led a large number of the population to look upon this war as a sporting event; something to be won or lost in a few innings with little consequence. With the death and destruction involved in war, it seems ironic to treat the situation with such frivolity.

National pride is one thing, allowing it to be used as a means to make someone rich is another. Patriotism is something that can be shown without wasting money on these types of products. We would like to ask the student body to seriously consider before buying these products, whether or not their purchase is capitalizing on the loss of human life.

Lynn Leslie

Correction

In Thursday's News the headline and story about Kelpie North American Holdings Limited indicated there would be between 14,000-16,000 jobs created.

The number of jobs created will be about 1,500.

Opinion

Do you think women should be allowed to serve in combat?

Muhammed Luster, junior IPCO major from Lima, O.

"I think they should be able to fight, but I think that only a foolish woman would want to be in battle. Men are supposed to be the protectors of a nation, not women."

Angie McMeekin, senior interior design major from Columbus.

"They should have the right because today women are a lot more liberated, and if they feel it's their duty to serve, they should have the opportunity."

Alicia Browne, history graduate student.

"Any female who could pass a physical test should be allowed to fight. I don't think there's any proof that she'd be a poor soldier, or that a man is necessarily a better soldier."

Craig Rouse, senior IPCO major from Milford, O.

"Yes. I think if they are trained the same as the men are, and they have the same qualifications, then why not?"

Writing plays large role in future career

by Morrella Raleigh
staff writer

Students interested in technical communications have the opportunity to join a campus organization designed to expand their knowledge of their prospective field.

The Society for Technical Communications is the largest international professional organization devoted to the practices and theory of technical communication, said faculty adviser Bonnie Fink. The campus chapter has been well established for more than 10 years.

Graduate English-technical writing student Susan Shambaugh said, "It helps you keep updated with technology and how the field is changing. It serves a great purpose in education."

Technical communication includes a range of occupations including medical and scientific writing, writing and producing training manuals, and videos and some public relations work, Fink, a technical writing instructor said.

Members of the University organization publish, Interchange, a quarterly newsletter sent to all STC chapters throughout the world. It covers technical communication topics including student issues such as job hunting and resume guides, she said.

Fink said the group's largest activity each year is its spring conference. This year's conference, "The Future of Technical Communication: Expectations, Opportunities, and Challenges," will be March 2.

"It offers [students] the opportunity to interact with professionals," Fink said.

STC also is sponsoring a book sale on March 13-14 on the first floor of University Hall. The proceeds will subsidize the costs of a national STC conference in New York that STC members are attending, Shambaugh said.

Book donations for the sale are tax-deductible and those interested can call 354-0385 for more information.

Classic film series starts Sunday

by Rodney Auth
writer

Is it true "Only Angels Have Wings?" Find out 7 p.m. Sunday in Gish Film Theater as University Activities Organization and Instructional Media kick off their four-part, Best Year in Film Series.

This month's theme, a tribute to 1939—considered the best year in film—features flicks of classic films including "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," to "Ninotchka," a romantic comedy starring Greta Garbo.

Determining what movies are shown and when is the responsibility of Film Series Director David Huffman. Huffman, a film studies major, takes his job seriously and makes every attempt possible to develop a well-rounded and diverse film series schedule.

Huffman said his committee attempts to "provide films which the ordinary student may not always have a chance to see."

"Cult Classics" and the Thursday international and art films are examples of the less mainstream films UAO provides.

Students benefit at FASE job fair War causes decline in SRAC duty

by Morrella Raleigh
staff writer

by Lori Miller
city writer

The Office of Financial Aid and Student Employment is sponsoring the 10th annual Summer Job Fair March 5 in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom.

The fair — 10:30 a.m. to 4 — will feature about 94 employers from Ohio and other states such as Pennsylvania, Michigan, New York, and Kentucky, Job Fair Coordinator Sue Butler said.

"There's a lot to see, a lot to learn, and a lot of good job possibilities," Butler said.

Butler said a variety of companies will be represented at the fair including J.C. Penney, the zoos of Toledo and Columbus, temporary services, and camps.

Display tables will be set up which include other job opportunities from companies around the country who are not represented at the fair, Butler said.

"It does fulfill our purpose [for the fair] which is to help the students find jobs for this summer," Butler said.

Previous fairs have been successful because they are easily accessible to students, said FASE employee and junior accounting major Rachel Whitaker, who has worked at the fair for two years.

"It gives [students] a lot of opportunities and choices for what they're going to do for the summer," Whitaker said.

"[Students] don't have to make a special trip home to line up a job for the summer," Butler added.

Butler said students can dress casually for the fair and she recommends they bring a resume.

Participants are given a registration packet with information about the represented employers when they enter the fair. They can then go to booths of the companies they are interested in to ask questions, Butler said, but recommends students wait before committing to a job.

Butler said sometimes college credit may be available for positions and the jobs can also lead to internships.

"I think it's worth any student's time to at least come up and see the employers who are there," Butler said.

INSURANCE

"The only kind of plan the University could make available would be a mandatory group plan, and all graduate students wouldn't buy into that," he said. "[Health insurance] is obviously desirable for every person, but we just can't do that because of the numbers."

Olskamp said he has seen requests for graduate health insurance at least five times since he came to the University in 1982.

Berman also said the University would have a tough time affording a health insurance plan for all graduate students, but said Olskamp has not considered all the options.

"[Olskamp] doesn't know what's going on right now," Berman said. "What Lou Katzner is looking into is something Olskamp hasn't considered yet."

Berman would not release details of any options GSS and Katzner are considering.

"I'd rather let [Katzner] do his homework than alert the wrong people and have them stomp on it," he said. "Olskamp is looking at it as who will pay one gigantic bill and it won't happen that way."

Berman said 10 to 15 percent of graduate students do not have any form of health insurance. Berman is one of those students.

"It's a traumatic, frightening experience," he said. "It's a terrible thing, and it puts a lot of stress on you."

The major force behind last semester's fight for student rights following the East Merry/Frazer Avenue block parties has become what its critics predicted — a fading memory.

Student Rights Activism Coalition, SRAC, is still around but not to the extent it was last semester, said member Tim Strauss.

SRAC members, many of whom were Peace Coalition members, turned their attention more toward the war rather than events on campus, Strauss said.

War has a lot of bad consequences, he said, and although students are still concerned about domestic problems, they are more focused on what is happening in Iraq and Saudi Arabia.

"While at war a lot of things get overlooked," he said. "It takes our attentions away from civil problems at home."

Although SRAC seemed to suddenly appear after the controversial block parties, Strauss said the organization was working on campus before the rallies and marches occurred.

Previously, SRAC was just a group of people who would meet and discuss various topics, he said.

However, when students complained their rights were violated by the police, SRAC turned their attention solely to that topic.

East Merry was an example of how people in Bowling Green do not recognize student rights, he said.

Because of SRAC and several student complaints, city council debated how future block parties should be handled during many of its council meetings.

SAE discovers its past

by Jacqueline Porter
staff writer

In 1945, five University men compiled a scrapbook depicting their pride in Bowling Green and Sigma Alpha Epsilon, the fraternity they had just founded.

More than 45 years later several SAE members discovered this hidden treasure while rummaging through an old box, and it has given them insight to the fraternity's past.

According to SAE President Mike Maruna, the scrapbook was found recently in the fraternity house storage room in the bottom of a box when the fraternity was looking for items that would aid them in spring rush.

Maruna said the numerous pictures, letters, news clippings and maps in the scrapbook have helped the fraternity understand the history about themselves and the University.

"All the stuff in it is about the history of this chapter [and the University]," he said. "When we found it we brought it out and just looked at it for about two hours," he added.

The fact the scrapbook was put together during World War

"A lot of fraternities and sororities have basically lost a lot of their tradition — but this should help cultivate some of that tradition back into the greek system."

—SAE President Mike Maruna,

II makes it very meaningful, Maruna said.

"[The book] shows the significance of the times," he said. "The book looks at some things like VE Day — Victory in Europe Day."

The book also depicts the University as it was in 1945, he said.

"It's got a picture of what the University looked like, how small it was and you can imagine what it was like," he said.

Maruna said the scrapbook is very significant to their chapter.

"It basically relays a lot of tradition and history of the chapter itself — you always hear about national history but never about your own chapter's history."

"I guess the significance is for the younger members of this chapter to look back and think, 'Wow, we've been around since 1945 here at Bowling Green,'" he added.

he added. "Basically it's something to look back on and have pride for our chapter."

Maruna said in looking at the book, he has noticed many changes in the traditions of fraternities and sororities during the years.

"It's interesting to see what we were actually like back then and how we compare today," he said. "A lot of fraternities and sororities have basically lost a lot of their tradition — but this should help cultivate some of that tradition back into the greek system," he said.

"A fraternity today is no longer the beer bashing parties that they used to be — today fraternities have to offer something more," including leadership and a chance for development, he added.

Maruna believes the scrapbook was put together with great care for future members of SAE to learn from.

senators with the Ethics Committee, denounced the committee's action as "a cop-out and a damning indictment of the committee."

Another lobbying group, Public Citizen, was equally critical, saying "by slapping the guilty four on the wrist, the committee has slapped taxpayers in the face."

In reality, substantial political punishment was meted out to the five during months of hearings and headlines.

Meanwhile, the Ethics Committee may have set a course that changes the rules governing all 100 senators and their political contributors.

It called for creation of a bipartisan task force to decide just what senators can or cannot do when they approach regulators on behalf of constituents.

While "general guidelines" exist, the committee said, the task force will need to address "the special ethical problems which may arise when such contact or intervention is sought by individuals who have contributed to the senator's campaigns or causes."

Codifying the rules for such contacts will help. But there are far broader proposals pending before Congress, particularly those dealing with campaign financing.

Physical fitness tips outlined to maintain health

by Greg Watson
staff writer

When some people think of physical fitness, they think of spending many strenuous hours exercising at the Student Recreation Center.

Steven Blair, director of epidemiology at the Institute for Aerobics Research in Dallas, Texas said in a speech Thursday night, recent research has proven constant, strenuous exercise is not needed to remain healthy, but every day activities can be used to remain physically fit.

"We are told exercise is good for you, but we are also told exercise is running the marathon — this simply is not true," Blair said.

More than 200 people attended the lecture, which was a part of the Health Fair and sponsored by the Student Recreation Center and Wellnet, a University health network.

Blair has published more than 100 articles about health and exercise in scientific and medical journals and has been featured in articles by Newsweek, Time, Sports Illustrated and USA Today.

Blair said people can work exercise into their every day activities by:

- brisk walking,
- garden work,
- home repair,
- dancing,
- leisure sports,
- house work.

A study by the Aerobics Center of Longitudinal Study indicated the longer life-spans of the physically fit compared to others, Blair said.

"[The studies showed] low fitness is associated with increased all-cause, cardiovascular and cancer deaths," Blair said.

The study also revealed more than 20 percent of the people in the U.S. do not exercise, do housework, yard work or any physical exercise in their job, Blair said.

"I have written many prescriptions for people who do not follow proper exercise habits," he said.

Blair said the most common excuses given by people for not exercising are lack of time, inconvenience of exercising, and the exercise regimes are too complicated.

Expensive exercise equipment and meeting the recommended dose of exercise are other excuses people give for not exercising, he said.

Some exercise tips Blair gave to the audience included:

- Something is better than nothing. Blair said five minutes of exercise per day is better than none and can help prolong one's life.

- Emphasize moderate exercise. Exercises such as brisk walking and climbing stairs are activities Blair recommended for people unable to take time to exercise.

- Make physical activity an integral part of life. Taking the stairs instead of the elevator and walking to the supermarket instead of driving are among the ways people can make exercise an every day activity, Blair said.

- De-emphasize the medical and scientific approaches to exercise. Blair said too many times, people take articles in medical and scientific articles too seriously.

Bike-To-The-Bay planned for June

Benefits will be used to aid MS society

by Patrick Shepherd
writer

Area businesses are sponsoring the MS 150 Bike-To-The-Bay, a charity event to benefit the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Coordinated by the Northwest Ohio Chapter of the organization, this 150 mile, two-day biking tour is set for June 29 and 30.

Donna Greenwald, director of development and bike tour coordinator for the Northwest Ohio chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society, is organizing the event.

Last year's local event had 1,201 registrants and grossed more than $200,000, while this year's goal is targeted between $250,000 and $275,000, she said.

Greenwald expects nearly 2,000 participants this year.

"This event is an important fundraiser for the MS society," Greenwald said. The number of nationally reported cases of Multiple Sclerosis has nearly doubled since the last reporting period. The figure has risen to 87 per 100,000 Americans, from a previous assessment of 48 per 100,000.

"Northwest Ohio has the highest prevalence rate of MS in the state of Ohio," Greenwald stated. "This region maintains a [reported case] rate of 102 per 100,000 people," she continued.

The remaining 40 percent of the gross proceeds will be transferred to the national organization, where the funds will be used to find the cause and cure for MS.

Brochures have been distributed throughout the Bowling Green area for those who want information about the bike tour.

Registration forms are included in the literature.

Each participant must pay a $25 registration fee and collect a minimum of $150 in tax deductible pledges. After May 5, the entrance fee will rise to $30.

Easy Street Cafe will be sponsoring a "recruit and ride party" for prospective registrants on April 18 at 7 p.m.

Greenwald said Cycle Werks, 248 1/2 S. Main St., a downtown bicycle shop is also participating in the event.

Cycle Werks will provide "day-of-event mechanical support to the riders," and will assist in bike repairs for a portion of the travel route.

Dave Pickering, owner of Cycle Werks, said he will provide free bike inspections and "tune-ups."

The proceeds from the event will be divided between the National MS Society and the Northwest Chapter, with 60 percent staying in Northwest Ohio, Greenwald said.

A series of prizes will be awarded for the top fundraisers of this national event and include:

- A trip to the 1992 Tour de France will be awarded to the top fundraiser in the country, which was sponsored by Continental Airlines.

- A five-day trip to San Francisco for the top fundraiser in Northwest Ohio, which was donated by Northwest Airlines and Atlas Tours and Travel.

- Two round-trip tickets to any Continental Airlines' destination in the United States, Canada, or Mexico for the local runner-up.

The bike path will be a round-trip route extending between the University of Toledo campus and Port Clinton.

Bikers will encamp at Port Clinton High School on Saturday night before they make the 75 mile return journey.

Those who are interested in participating in the event and are unable to find a brochure should contact the Northwest Ohio Chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society at (419) 531-1571.

Loans

may be transferred to any of the hundreds of statewide credit agencies. But according to Hanlon, a bad credit rating can easily overstep state boundaries.

"Over a period of time, the local credit bureaus may transfer the negligent account to one of the three computer vendors nationally," he said. "So even if a former BG student moves to Tempe, Ariz. [he or she] could experience a very unhappy surprise when trying to apply for credit."

"In any situation, the credit granter makes the ultimate decision and [previous debts] may have little effect on this," he said.

Along with unpaid utilities and rental fees, students sometimes fail to pay back student loans after graduation, especially if employment is difficult to find.

But neglecting to pay back a student loan can have a negative effect on a former student's credit rating for several years, according to Ohio Student Loan Commission Representative James Biddle.

"If the borrower misses a payment, after 90 days, the OSLC gets involved," he said. "After a period of 180 days, the bank will ask us to buy the loan. In this instance, the Department of Education will take over the loan. So, essentially, the borrower will owe the U.S. government the full amount of the loan plus interest."

Because of the involvement of the federal government, Biddle warns serious repercussions can result from defaulting on a loan.

State deliberates welfare cutbacks to offset losses

COLUMBUS (AP) — State Budget Director Greg Browning confirmed Thursday the state administration is considering budget cuts in a welfare program that serves about 131,000 people.

He said while the details involving General Assistance remain under study and are subject to final approval by Gov. George Voinovich, they will be a part of "a restructuring that will take care of emergencies and make people self-sustaining."

Browning commented on reports among county human service directors and others that the General Assistance program may be cut to about $54 million from $320 million a year. The program primarily serves people who do not qualify for Aid to Dependent Children.

The ADC program has nearly 700,000 recipients, and about 55 percent of its costs are picked up by the federal government.

Browning said General Assistance is underwritten by the state and the counties, with the state paying 84 percent and the counties 16 percent.

Therefore, the General Assistance budget is a large item in the two-year budget that Voinovich is trying to put together. Sharp declines in revenue are projected because of a recession.

Voinovich has mentioned a projected deficit ranging to $2 billion.

Browning did not confirm or dispute the figures being circulated by county directors and other welfare advocates, including the Ohio State Legal Services and the Have-A-Heart Ohio Coalition.

But he said there may be reductions in or elimination of General Assistance benefits to younger recipients, generally those out of high school and ranging up to about 25 years of age.

Two years ago, the legislature passed a law requiring enrollment in a school or job-training program as a condition to receiving General Assistance.

Browning expects to send the budget to the legislature around March 15.

Falcon hockey begins trek to 'Joe'

by Steve Easton
assistant sports editor

Regular-season records can be thrown out the window when post-season play begins, but Ferris State's playoff inexperience may be something which can't be.

The BG hockey team is hoping to take advantage of this factor in the team's first-round Central Collegiate Hockey Association series.

While the Falcons do possess a post-season tradition which consists of nine straight trips to the CCHA semifinals, they will still be the underdog when the two teams meet in Big Rapids, Mich. in a best two-of-three series beginning 7:30 tonight at Ewingle Ice Arena.

The Falcons finished in sixth place (13-17-2 CCHA, 15-21-2 overall) compared to the Bulldogs' third-place spot and No. 15 national ranking. Ferris State (15-12-5, 21-12-5) captured the season series by a slim 2-1 margin with BG tying and losing at Ferris Nov. 16 and 17.

The Falcons' CCHA playoff record under coach Jerry York is 24-16-2. Compare this to FSU's all-time mark of 3-17-3 in — and the fact of York holding a 24-13-5 record against Ferris and is 10-7-3 in Big Rapids.

FSU first-year coach Bob Mancini realizes the inexperience of his team but will play the series one game at a time.

"We have a very young team with little playoff experience, and we've never had home ice before," Mancini said. "We're treating the season one day at a time."

York said Friday's game will be the primary goal for the Falcons.

"The first game is utmost in our minds," York said. "We will adjust to the rest of the series after Friday tonight."

In the four games between the BG and FSU, Peter Holmes (26 goals-27 assists-53 points) led BG with four goals and an assist and Ken Klee (7-28-35) notched a goal and six assists. Rod Taylor (38-14-52) led FSU with six goals and an assist.

Other players to watch for on the offensive end for BG are Brett Harkins (21-36-57) and Martin Jiranek (31-22-53), while John dePourcq (13-43-56), Bob Nardella (12-26-38), Daniel Chaput (6-30-36), and Aaron Asp (11-21-32) spark the Bulldog attack.

Senior goalie John Burke (3-5-1, 3.83 goals against average in the CCHA) will start in goal for BG Friday with Ferris expected to rotate Mark Felicio (9-4-4, 3.23 GAA) and Pat Mazzoli (12-7-1, 3.28 GAA) in the series.

"We think we've solidified our goaltending with John Burke taking charge down the stretch," York said.

Despite BG's poor regular-season showing, its success in past years could provide the advantage in pushing the Falcons past the Bulldogs. Twelve players on this year's roster were sophomores on the 1988-89 squad which won a playoff series on the road against Michigan.

"We feel we can advance to Joe Louis by playing solid hockey in a lot of different areas," York said. "We're going to use every possible means to get to Joe Louis."

Women's race undecided Falcons can finish from second to fourth place

by Brian Dugger
sports writer

The time is near.

The time for the Mid-American Conference tournament, that is.

However, the women have one game remaining. A game that could have important implications on the conference race. The Miami Redskins pay a visit to Anderson Arena 12:45 p.m. Saturday.

As the result of Bowling Green's loss on Wednesday to Ball State and Miami's victory against Central Michigan, the Redskins have pulled to within a game of the Falcons. BG sports a 9-6 record while MU comes in at 8-7.

The Falcons have locked up at least fourth place in the conference, but if they are able to beat the Redskins and CMU loses to Western Michigan, BG will finish in second place and will finish at least third if they defeat MU.

In Miami, the Falcons face a team that has won four consecutive games, including a 69-65 victory against nationally ranked Notre Dame to start its streak.

Earlier in the season BG pulled out a 50-44 over the Redskins to start the MAC season.

The low-scoring game has been a trademark of MU play this season. They lead the conference in scoring defense, holding opponents to 63.9 points per game. Six times this year they have held opponents to fewer than 55 points — winning all but the BG game.

"They have a good defense and like to slow the running game down," BG guard Wanda Lyle said. "We're going to have to execute our half-court offense and look for our inside people."

The Falcons will depend on sophomore forward Andrea Nordmann to carry much of the inside scoring load. Nordmann led BG to victory against the Redskins with nine points and 14 rebounds. She continues to lead the team in scoring and rebounding at 12.6 ppg and 7.8 rpg.

Julie Howell leads the Miami attack averaging scoring at 13.6 ppg. She is also the most dependable shooter with a MAC-leading .456 shooting percentage.

"They're a methodical team," BG head coach Fran Voll said. "They don't get high offensive production, but I think their strength is in shooting the ball."

BG seniors look to go out in style

by Todd Herzog
sports writer

This is it, the Falcons last stand.

It will take place 3 p.m. Saturday when the Miami Redskins come to town with both teams needing this game for various reasons.

Not only is it the last game of the year, it is the last home game seniors Joe Moore, Clinton Venable, Ed Colbert, Steve Watson, Derek Kizer and Juan Street.

Coming off a sub-par performance at Ball State Wednesday, the seniors and the rest of the squad need to make an about face to gain momentum heading into the Mid-American Conference tournament.

The Redskins enter Anderson in a second place tie with Ball State in the MAC with a 10-4 mark but are coming off an overtime loss against Central Michigan Wednesday. A victory would allow the Redskins to maintain their second place position.

The Redskins are led by 6-7 forward David Scott 17.4 ppg, 6-7 forward Craig Michaels 13.6 and has 6-10 Jim Paul at center.

In order for the Falcons to come away with a victory, they will have to turn their level of play a notch.

"When you see a team diving for loose balls and running down long rebounds, that's when you know you have a team that really

Gymnasts home for three-straight meets

by Glen Lubbert
sports writer

There's no place like home. There's no place like home.

That's what coach Charles Simpson and the rest of the women's gymnastics team will be thinking on Sunday when it competes in the Eppler North Gymnasium against the No. 1 ranked team in the Mid-American Conference, Simpson Eastern Michigan.

After a long set of away meets,

BG gymnastics has returned with an improved all-around squad.

"It's been four long weeks, and were glad we're home," Simpson said. "It's our opportunity to show our fans how we've improved over the last couple of weeks."

Simpson is impressed with the improvement his Falcon squad has made while on the road.

"We've been away using different equipment against different judges," Simpson said. "Now we're home with our own equipment and judges we know."

Junior Mary Beth Friel agreed with the home advantage on the equipment.

"The different equipment is

Ohio posts impressive first-day performance in Championships

BG women trail Bobcats by 59 points, actions resumes tomorrow

by Kevin Cummings
sports writer

The first day does not make an entire meet, but by judging Ohio University's performance in the Mid-American Conference swimming championships Thursday — they remain the team to beat.

The Bobcats rolled up 243 points after six events to take a 36 point lead over second place Miami (207). Bowling Green is third with 184 points, Ball State fourth (170), and Eastern Michigan brings up the rear with 144.

Tracy Edmister led the Redskin 200 yard freestyle relay team to a victory in the evenings first event as they covered the distance in 1:35.11. Edmister broke the MAC record in her part of the race with a split of 0:23.51. She narrowly missed another first, as she finished runnerup in the 200 individual medley only 0:00.35 seconds out of the top spot.

"I'm really scared to death of Miami," BG head coach Brian Gordon said. "If they put it all together they could be the team to beat."

Ohio took top honors in the days' other four races as Amy Lockard won the 500 freestyle 4:54.62, Maureen Newlon the 200 individual medley (2:04.16), and Joy Clark the 50 freestyle (0:23.53). The 400 medley relay team also took top honors as they set a new MAC record (3:47.26).

BSU found their success in the 1 meter diving event as the Cardinals took the top two spots. Dawn Ford finished ahead of the pack with a score of 408.55, while teammate Eden Zazove was runnerup with a final tally of 397.35.

BG's top finish came in the 400 medley relay (3:51.73/new BGSU record) as the squad finished in the second spot only four and a half seconds off the pace of OU. The Falcons best individual performance was turned in by Angie Gillett as she edged Miami's Chris McFadden for fourth place in the 1 meter diving with a final round total of 359.50. Only one point kept her from third position.

"We swam really well today, but so did Ohio," BG assistant coach Sue Nutty said. "But it's way to early in the meet to draw any conclusions."

Other notable Falcon finishes were turned in by Gina Jacobs who was fifth in the 500 yard freestyle (5:02.54), and sixth place finishes by both Keely Yenglin (500 freestyle/5:05.56) and Trish Klammeier (200 individual medley/2:09.08). BG also had a fourth place finish in the 200 freestyle relay.

"Trish did a great job in the 200, as did Angie in the one meter diving," Gordon said. "We're not at all disappointed with tonight's events. It's very early and anything can happen."

Eastern Michigan had two third place finishes as Nicole Ray was second runnerup in the 500 freestyle (5:00.96), and Ann Bollinger third in the 50 freestyle (0:24.13).

"We knew we were going to have a tough day today," Gordon said. "We just wanted to stay in contention for the next two days, and we've done that."

"We expect to get up and swim our best tomorrow morning [today] in the preliminaries. That will determine our fate," Gordon added.

Second and third day preliminaries are today and Saturday starting at 11 a.m., with finals beginning both days at 7 p.m. All events are taking place in BGSU's Cooper Pool.

wants to win," said head coach Jim Larranaga. "And for one reason or another we just haven't had that kind of commitment."

This season has been one of many ups and downs. But a win in this last contest should give the Falcons momentum heading into the tournament at Cobo Hall.

"Dave Traylor (senior) and John Slater (junior) have a good chance in the 35 pound weight throw and Todd Black will try to qualify in the 800 meters," he said. "Bill Overla (junior) has an outside chance if he can find the strength."

Traylor said he only has one goal for the weekend.

"My only goal is to qualify for the NCAA meet in the 35 pound weight throw," he said. "The way that I have been throwing, I know that I am capable of doing it."

Injuries this weekend include freshmen Dave Carlson and Aaron Straw and sophomore Shawn Blanchett all of whom have hamstring injuries. They will not compete this weekend.

With the indoor season coming to a close, the men are looking to get healthy and tune up for the outdoor season.

"Basically, this is the last competition for the indoor season and we will use it to prepare for the outdoor season," men's head coach Sid Sink said.

A limited number of men's track team members and the full women's track squad competed last night in the Last Chance Eastern Michigan meet in a final attempt to qualify for the NCAA Indoor Track Championships March 8-9 at Indianapolis — results were not available.

The men will also travel to the Silverston Invitational at Ann Arbor, Michigan on Saturday Sink said he hopes to qualify

Student refutes Murphy's Law

Editor The News:

Patrick Murphy's recent column concerning arbitration and the rise of professional baseball salaries was an insipid and boorish example of the thoughtlessness that mars sports journalism today. Mr. Murphy glibly attacked Jose Canseco, Roger Clemens, and other baseball players for their "outrageous" salaries, relying on the hackneyed reasoning that they do not deserve the money they earn. Like his fellow sportswriters, Mr. Murphy refused to employ any insight or original thought in analyzing the salary situation. Instead, he chose to stand behind typical complaints and outlandish opinions.

Why do fans like Mr. Murphy insist on evaluating the price of popular entertainment? It is impossible to gauge or limit the value of entertainment. Clemens will earn more than $5 million per year; "Arnold" reportedly makes $20 million per movie; Phil Collins grossed more than $60 million on his last tour. Is this too much? Perhaps it is too little.

Regardless of their salaries, it is impossible to concretely state what baseball players are worth in terms of dollars. Apparently, they are valued, at least monetarily, more than police officers and teachers, but are not valued more than movie and music stars. Finally, the players themselves should not be faulted for the rapid rise in baseball salaries. Behind every salary is an owner who capitulated to the players' request. Even arbitration is a right granted by the owners in the Basic Agreement.

Baseball suffers not from high player salaries, but from irresponsible journalists like Mr. Murphy who cater to misinformation and ignorance. Thankfully, in a few weeks their flatulence will be replaced by boxscores and batting averages.

Men's tennis team defeats Ferris St.

Men take on Akron and NIU this weekend

by Sebastian Caruthers
sports writer

Home sweet home.

That is what the men's tennis team was saying after it outplayed Ferris State, 6-3, at the Findlay Racquet Club Wednesday.

"Ferris State is ranked 10th in the country in Division II tennis," BG head coach Gene Orlando said. "This win is a mile marker for our program because we are on a journey to be the best team we can possibly be."

Recording wins for BG in singles play were freshmen Richard Watson, Jim Snyder, and Jeff Huffman; sophomore Justin Overholser and senior Steve Mudre.

These players did not merely beat their opponents, they totally dominated them.

Watson easily handled Mike Haber, 6-2, 6-2. Snyder crushed Roger Seabrook, 6-2, 7-5. Huffman did not even break a sweat as he embarrassed Brent Chaffee, 6-0, 6-0. Mudre had a small problem with Scott Anderson in the first set, 7-5, but he got the job done in the second set as he defeated Anderson 6-2.

Overholser was the only player to go the distance. Not that it mattered since he picked John Huss apart, 6-2, in the third set.

However, the Falcons did encounter some resistance. Once again the doubles teams could not get in sync as the Bulldogs won two of the three doubles matches.

Giving BG its only win in doubles was the tandem of seniors Doug Dickinson and Mike Teets. The Falcons' only consistent duo throttled Seabrook and Chaffee 6-4, 6-0.

"The team played tremendously," Orlando said. "This win was especially nice because we lost to almost the exact same team two years ago by a score of 7-2."

The tennis team will look for its third straight win today when they meet Northern Illinois at the Findlay Racquet Club at 2 p.m.

"Northern Illinois is a very good team," Orlando said. "They had a very successful fall campaign and have not really lost stride this winter."

The Huskies are ranked thirteenth in the Midwest and were picked in a pre-season poll to win their conference this year.

Even so, freshman Richard Watson thinks good play by the team as a whole should benefit BG in the end.

"For us to beat the Huskies will take a total team effort, with everyone playing their best tennis," Watson said.

After their match against Northern Illinois, the Falcons will take on Akron at the Findlay Racquet Club Sunday at 10 a.m.

"The Zips beat up on us last year, 6-3, on the road," Orlando said. "We are really looking forward to showing them the same hospitality this year by returning the favor."

Freshman Jim Snyder believes the outcome should be different this year because of the new team philosophy.

"The success of our tennis program is our system," Snyder said. "It's not he who makes the system work well, but it's the system who makes him work well."

always a problem when we travel," Friel said. "When we're not familiar with the equipment, we have to adjust. I don't feel it's a big drawback. In fact, I can't say I lost a meet due to poor conditions."

After a week off from competition, the Hurons travel to BG where they were defeated by the Falcons two years ago, 177-90-176.65. However, last season when the Falcons traveled to Ypsilanti, they lost by 1.95 points.

"We lose up there, and we beat them here," Simpson said. "It's the same way when we compete against Kent. That's the way the MAC goes unless you're a strong team like Eastern Michigan."

Simpson believes EMU has a very impressive squad this year. That's true considering they have the highest team score in the MAC — well over three and a half points higher than the Falcons school record high score. In addition, Hurons' Robin Loheide (38.15) and Allyson Newman (38.15) hold the top two performances of the season in the all-around competition — both scores eclipse Friel's school record by eight-tenths.

EMU's Newman also accomplished the top score on the uneven parallel bars with a 9.7.

However, Simpson thought those scores were a little high.

"Scores tend to inflate drastically at their place," Simpson said. "We're going to take advantage of meeting them at our place. Strong fan support will definitely intimidate them and it will help our girls."

Even after a loss to host Central Michigan last week and a 1-2 record and fourth-place in the MAC, the Falcons aren't planning to make any drastic changes in their routines.

"We hope to hit the bars and stay on the beam," Simpson said. "Eastern is known for its strength on the bars. But, we are very good in the floor exercise. It's the only event we beat Central in last week. I think that we showed we can compete with the best on the floor."

Like Dorothy in "The Wizard of Oz," being home is important. In fact, Sunday's meet, which starts at 1 p.m., kicks off a three-meet homestand for the Falcons.

"Competing at home is very important in gymnastics," Simpson said. "That's why we're going to take definite advantage of our next three home meets."

FROM INSIDE THE INSIDER

Once again, Sean's artistic mayhem has left us with little but a lettuce patch to fill with our insight and shameless hype concerning the journalistic mutant you hold in your hands. Here we go.

"American Psycho" has been called a pretty sick book, but does that mean it shouldn't be published? Is Bret Easton Ellis a first amendment warrior or a money-grubbing literary yuppie? Wendy M. King answers these burning questions on page five.

Doodles. Comedy and rock. Kirk Pavelich. Page four. "Mis-anthropo" review. Nobody likes a tease. Jen Taday. Page six. The walls are closing in.

Interplanet Janet, she's a galaxy girl.
The Editors.

TALKING BACK

Readers are invited to write to The Insider magazine at 210 West Hall, Bowling Green State University, Bowling Green, Oh. 43403 to tell us off or pat us on the back (whatever the situation merits).

Anyone interested in working for The Insider as a writer, artist, or photographer should call 372-6967.

Submissions of short fiction (five typewritten pages maximum unless other arrangements are made) are encouraged.

The Insider editors welcome any and all submissions for publication. Unless arrangements are made by the author to have the material returned, all submissions become the property of The Insider.

Rock of Ages: Don't seat anyone over 30

An ill-wind of sour anger is spreading across the nation. Fruits wither and die on the vine. People fight and hate without knowing why. The sun hangs like a bright but coldly oppressive bulb in a grey, dark sky. Gary dies on "thirtysomething." And all this misery and horror can be traced to one source of all-oppressive evil...old people going to rock concerts.

I spent a Tuesday night at the Replacements concert in Cincinnati a couple of weeks ago. Smoke was swirling all around me. Fellow 'ments fans were going and air guitaring their ill' hearts out. Westenberg, Stinson et al. were jamming like rock was meant to be played. The decibels altered migration patterns of small flocks of birds. And I...endured yells of "Hey, why-dontcha sidown?! We can't see!" from these yuppified, Polo-wearing, thirty-something twits and lead butts.

I mean, c'mon, let's get real. Sure they bought their tickets, too. But you don't pay good cash for a kick-butt rock concert and expect to sit down. It's like buying a Ferrari and wanting to only drive it on Sunday afternoons with your grandma. That's just plain stupid.

This is a problem I've actually grown up with. It first happened to me at my very first concert — a headbangin' Arlo Guthrie/John Prine folk extravaganza. Back then, as a wide-eyed pre-teen, I was all too easily cowed when some 40-year-old Arlo-hed told me to sit down. But the gravity of the situation wasn't driven home until a Rush show a few years back when the same thing happened. I couldn't understand it — why would someone go to a Rush concert and want to sit back and relax? Now, I understand the concept of being too tanked to even consider fighting gravity [Boy, do I understand that concept], but these folks were just plain old and lazy, not tanked.

It happened again at David Bowie and again at the Rolling Stones. I used to just think it was a phenomenon indigenous to classic rock until it happened at the Replacements show. And it always seems to be the same type of person who bugs me. I'm always bothered by a short, ugly woman [and if you're reading this, ma'am, you are very ugly] sitting with some six-foot-five walking slab of meat named Ed or Bubba or Frank. If it weren't for her backup, I'd just tell her to drop dead. But as it is, I enjoy my pretty-boy looks. And my nose in its original shape. The weird thing is, the women all look the same. If I didn't know better, I'd think some female John Hinckley Jr.-wannabe was following me from concert to concert [I always have felt a kinship with Jodie Foster since I saw Freaky Friday].

It's not just me; most of my friends have similar war stories to share. And no musician or band is safe from these so-called "fans." I've heard of similar happenings at the Who, U2 [back on their War Tour, even] and the Ramones. It even happened to me at a Grateful Dead/Crosby, Stills, Nash show last summer, but I was standing on a chair and the people only asked me to move to one side. It doesn't really count. At least, I think I was standing on a chair. To be honest, the whole day is kind of a haze to me.

Presidential elections are coming up next year. Bush already enjoys vast national popularity, but he'd really win that elusive 18 to 24-year-old voter if he'd do something with Congress about concert legislation. I mean, the state of concert-going in this nation is rapidly becoming a more pressing problem than the S&Ls or zebra mussels.

I'm not saying that older people should be prohibited from going to concerts. I'm just suggesting that they restricted to one area, instead of being allowed to roam free. Sort of a concert kennel. There could be an activity gauge in stadiums — like the height things at amusement parks: "You must be this energetic to sit in the non-geriatric seating."

I really see this as the defining political and social issue of the Nineties. Not environmentalism or New World Order or Reebok vs. Nike pumps. Concert etiquette. Better get on the bandwagon before it's too late.

University hall director hypes recycling to save environment

by Jack Hall
Contributing Writer

College student who hates roommate, has inferiority complex, suffers from alcohol abuse, can't cope with minority issues, needs a good laugh and is too dependent on parents but won't admit it is seeking a sincere 26-year-old SWM who is a good listener, a real humanitarian and a good role model.

Sometimes, some of us wish that we could take out an ad like this in the newspaper and have that special person give us a call. That someone needs to be a good friend, a teacher, a psychologist and a role model all wrapped into one.

Rodgers Hall Director Mark Shannon doesn't claim to have the solution to everyone's problems, but the 26-year-old College Student Personnel graduate student lives for the opportunity to help the residents of Rodgers and anyone else hit the curve balls that life throws everyone now and then.

In addition to the direction he tries to give students as a Hall Director, Shannon, a San Diego native, tries to teach University students about being environmentally responsible.

"My job provides such an opportunity to make a difference," he said. "I'm not going to be just another name rattled off a list at graduation."

After transferring from the University of Dayton, Shannon created Helping Ourselves Preserve the Environment (HOPE) in 1989. The group is designed to teach college students about environmental responsibility. As the developer of HOPE, Shannon has brought his feelings about the environment to his residents and other University students.

Shannon created HOPE as a guide that college students could use to take with them when they leave the University.

"Some of these people who graduate from this place will walk out into the world without knowing what the world really is," he said. "Before they make decisions to burn toxic chemicals, cut down forests or dump nuclear waste just so they can make money, I want them to know what they are doing to themselves, their children and the rest of the world."

"The news was scaring me and I only saw a few people doing anything about the environment," he said. "If anyone thinks

A WORLD OF DIFFERENCE: Rodgers Hall director Mark Shannon has made an impact at the University by founding the HOPE recycling program

the government, which is influenced by the corporations that contribute most to the environmental problems, is going to do anything about the environment, they are wrong. Solving the problem has to begin on the college campus."

Some students agree with Shannon. Kevin Stover, a night guard and resident of Rodgers, believes that the University students are too passive. "I think all the students are aware of the environmental issues but few know what to do about them," Stover remarked.

Shannon believes the HOPE program has had a positive effect on the University by making the campus more environmentally aware. Students such as Rodgers resident Frank Maimone believe that HOPE made University students aware. "It was a good program," Maimone said. "It was interesting to see how much trash one building such as Rodgers throws out in one day." Maimone was referring to a HOPE program on garbage disposal.

The HOPE program has had a positive influence in other areas of concern. Recycling programs have begun in the residence halls and the cafeterias and restaurants as a result of Shannon's actions through HOPE. However, Shannon's efforts have been hindered by the lack of administrative cooperation.

Shannon is referring to the lack of money available to recycle such items as glass. The need for large barrels to separate glass and prevent it from breaking is great. These barrels are purchased from recycling revenues and only a few can be purchased during any budget period because the administration does not contribute funds for the recycling program. As a result, glass recycling has been eliminated in all residence halls.

Although he has been a positive role model to the University, Shannon feels it is time to move on after graduation and set his influence into motion on another campus.

"Maybe I'll go to some small university in New England," he said. "There is more cooperation from the students, community and alumni at these universities."

As Shannon leaves the campus this May, he will leave behind friends, memories and a thought of hope: that colleges and universities will set the standards and values of society by instructing the students to be responsible citizens of our world.

Rockers meet clowns at club

by Kirk Pavelich
contributing writer

In a move geared to boost attendance and add variety to the local scene, one area night club has changed its format.

Over a one-month period, Doodles Comedy Club, located on 1616 East Wooster St., has transformed quietly from a non-alcoholic, comedy only club to one that has added live bands and liquor to the menu. According to the general manager and owner of the club, Frank Martin, the move appears to be working.

"There was a noticeable increase in business once the word got out that there was a full liquor license here," Martin said. "We recently had our first standing-room-only crowd."

Another manager of the club, Sean Rittenhouse, said that lack of attendance with the non-alcoholic format was directly responsible for the switch.

"We had difficulty getting the larger crowds when we were a non-alcoholic club," said Rittenhouse. "Now we're drawing a whole new type of crowd."

That's not to say the club no longer welcomes the underage crowd. Martin said that a good percentage of his business still comes from the under-21 age group.

Insider/Peter Allen

FOREWARNED IS FOUR-ARMED: Kurt Nolan busts up the Doodles crowd

"We still have a good variety of non-alcoholic cocktails," said Martin. "All we've done is increase our audience size because people that want to have a drink can come in now."

The move, which had been contemplated for some time, officially became reality last month. At that time, the club switched from having comedy shows on Fridays and Saturdays to a schedule that includes live bands and an open dance floor on Friday. Comedy is now one night only, with two shows each Saturday.

"I'd like to find maybe five bands that everybody likes — that's a nice variety — and just have them keep coming back," Martin said. "That also gives the audience a chance to plan and know when the band they like is going to be back."

Plans for the future may include a Thursday night lineup at the comedy club. Martin said this will happen "when the demand is too great for two nights only."

"We experimented with the live bands over Christmas break," said Rittenhouse. "Attendance has been building ever since."

NO WHAMMIES! Doctor Dave tips his hat to Grammys

by Dave Baskind
Incredible College of Musical Knowledge

You may be thinking by now, "I wonder how this year's Grammys affected Dr. Dave's life." Thanks for your concern. Dr. Dave had an incredibly fun night, as usual, watching the Grammys. My personal favorite on the show was the whole Dylan tribute: from that really cool Nicholson intro to that smokin' tune he sang(?) (I couldn't understand a word of it, either) to his confused acceptance speech (what did his dad tell him?—"He said a lot of things") complete with twitching and hat re-adjustments. Let me admit, in press, that Nurse Schmidt out-predicted yours truly on the televised awards. She now wants her own column.

She did manage to find time way from her prognosticating to discover only one perfect entry this week at "Dr. Dave's Incredible College of Musical Knowledge." That entry was sent in by Steve Knowlton, who was the only person in town to know that "New World Man" was Rush's only Top 40 hit. By the way, his favorite Saturday morning TV show is "Dungeons & Dragons."

BEST SELLER BLUES:

Bret Easton Ellis' "American Psycho" Struggles To See The Light Of Day

Bret Easton Ellis

By Wendy
M. King

Sex and violence have always been topics of fascination and condemnation in the United States, and because of this, novels such as Peyton Place, Wifey, Forever, and Satanic Verses are consistently popular.

Bret Easton Ellis' soon-to-be-released American Psycho, seems bound to join this notorious category, based on the controversy it has stirred up so far.

Ellis is the author of the 1985 bestseller Less Than Zero, and 1987's Rules of Attraction, his less successful second novel.

When Ellis submitted the manuscript for American Psycho, the publishing house of Simon and Schuster hastily accepted it, hoping it would be a return to the best-selling form of Less Than Zero. As the editors were fast at work, however, problems arose. They were offended by the con-ting to publish," Robert E. Snyder, the chairman of Simon and Schuster, said.

"The book crossed the boundaries of acceptable standards," he said. Snyder added that the cancellation of the publishing was "a matter of taste."

Depicting the life of an psychotic yuppie, the novel seemed to offend almost everyone who has taken as much as a glance at it. The main character is Patrick Bateman, "The Investment Banker from Hell," as described by Newsweek, who works in Manhattan. Bateman's life consists of killing bums, co-workers, children, and many women through various grotesque and barbaric means.

Some of the ways Bateman tortures and kills his victims are by electrocuting them, hooking women's breasts up to battery his next victim is forced to watch.

Though his crimes are plentiful and very obvious (he drops his bloody clothes off at the dry-cleaners as if nothing is wrong and the remains of his victims are splattered on the walls of his apartment), no one ever questions Bateman's behavior, and he is never investigated for the crimes.

"Compared to this book, Friday the 13th would be endorsed by the Vatican," Martin Davis, chairman of Paramount Communications, the corporate parent of Simon and Schuster, said in Newsweek.

Tony Sloan, graduate fellow of American Culture Studies, read an excerpt of the book to his Post Modern America class, to illustrate an example of Post Modern literature. He said he feels the controversy is unjustified. "It's very unfair to pick out passages here and there and to use those to construct an argument about a book or author. It has to be taken in context. One point of Post Modern literature is what gives anything its meaning is the context — context is all there is," Sloan said.

Sloan said he thinks works such as American Psycho should be published.

"I'd rather have (this) sort of literature out in the open so we can deal with it," Sloan said. According to Sloan, Bret Easton Ellis has appointed himself the spokesman of the twentysomething generation — a generation that "lacks coherence," but he feels Ellis does not successfully represent that generation.

Sonny Mehta, president of Vintage Books, said he accepted the book because he has worked with Ellis in the past, on Less Than Zero.

"Bret Ellis is a remarkable, talented young writer," Mehta said. "It is particularly appropriate that we will publish Bret's book curiosity about Mr. Ellis's new book that we bring out American Psycho now... to swiftly reach the widest possible readership," Mehta said.

Ellis said in a recent Vintage press release that he is awaiting the publication of his book, because it will give the public a chance to develop their own thoughts about it.

"(The) readers can judge the merits of my book, instead of the press accounts of it, for themselves," Ellis said.

The perversity of the novel and the scandal that has surrounded American Psycho since mid-1990 will most likely cause sales to skyrocket when it is finally released on March 15 by Vintage Books. Although the book is being re-edited and shortened by Vintage, it will probably retain all the gore, sex, and violence of the tents of the book. Simon and Schuster carefully re-evaluated the work and, even after paying Ellis an advance of $300,000, refused to publish it.

"American Psycho is not a book Simon and Schuster is will-cables, and nailing them to the floor, then cutting them up with drills or knives. Bateman sometimes even resorts to cannibalism. In one scene, Bateman uses the severed head of his victim to perform fellatio on himself, while fled. "It's very unfair to pick out passages here and there and to use those to construct an argument about a book or author. It has to be taken in context. One point of Post Modern literature is in the Vintage Contemporaries series," Mehta said, adding that the series features "the best and most vibrant of the new, young voices in American fiction."

"It seems to me appropriate, given the immense coverage and original manuscript. Bret Easton Ellis will join the ranks of rappers 2 Live Crew as artists who have capitalized commercially on the narrowing of the American mind.

Perhaps the publication of this

'Doors' to open

After tons of pre-release media hype, Oliver Stone's "The Doors," a much-ballyhooed biographical film about the legendary 60s rock group of the same name, will be nationally released today.

To celebrate the event, Woodland Cinemas at the Woodland Mall in Bowling Green is creating a 60s double feature by showing "Woodstock," the acclaimed documentary of the generation's festival of peace, love, and music, after the 9:45 showing of "The Doors" tonight and tomorrow night. Woodland

Jim Morrison lights your fire in "The Doors"

Cinema is also offering free admission to any one who can answer the following trivia question:

What was the reptilian media nickname of Doors' ringmaster Jim Morrison?

Anybody who can answer this question will be entitled to see both "The Doors" and "Woodstock." Those answering the question MUST PRESENT A COPY OF THIS ARTICLE AT THE WOODLAND CINEMAS BOX OFFICE.

MY HEAD, YOUR LAP: Tom Pullin and Michelle Goodman get to know each other better in "The Misanthrope"

Love slaves clash in play

by Jennifer Taday
contributing writer

Love, deception, commitment and jealousy are characteristics one expects to find in a soap opera, but Moliere's "Misanthrope" brings these elements to life on stage.

The production, directed by Mary Boone, opened last night and will continue through this weekend and March 7-9 at Eva Marie Saint Theater in University Hall.

The "Misanthrope" centers around the indecisiveness of Celimene, played by Michelle Goodman, and all of her male suitors.

Celimene's interaction with men depicts her as a flirt and a tease, but this character comes across as caring for Alceste, played by Tom Pullin, more so than the other men in the first act. Also, like her relationships with male friends, the character's affections are not constant with female friends either.

Alceste is an extremely jealous mate and demands that Celimene choose between himself and all of the other men, but Celimene suggests that her verbalization of her feelings for him should be enough.

Clitandre, played by Dave Lockard, and Acaste, played by Dean Yohnk, are two other suitors for Celimene and they play well off of each other when describing their likes and dislikes of women. These two characters appear to be good friends, who would not mind receiving Celimene's hand, but would not be disappointed if the other won the "prize."

The only straight forward and sincere love story is between Clitandre's cousin Eliante, played by Teresa Durbin, and Philinte,

Dancing toward a sold-out series

If the Joseph Holmes Dance Theatre sells out its Friday, March 8, performance, it will cap a sell-out season for the 1990-91 Festival Series. And it appears likely to happen with only 80 tickets left for the performance, which features a dance troupe blending a mixture of excitement, emotion, desire and talent.

The concert will be held in Koblacker Hall of the Moore Musical Arts Center.

The company, three times nominated for the N.A.C.A.'s Performing Artist of the Year, is a multi-racial troupe that consistently brings audiences to their feet across the country. Maintaining its philosophy of creating and performing original choreography, it grips audiences of all ages with the breadth of its repertory. From "Aretha," a suite from the streets, to "Turning the Tides," an exquisite expression of emotion, JHDT illuminates life's dramatic moments.

Founded in 1974, the company was led for 12 years by Joseph Holmes, founder and director. In 1986, upon Holmes' death, Randy Duncan was chosen as Holmes' successor to carry out his vision and bring the company to world-class recognition.

JHDT has an extensive national touring roster which takes it to the East coast, the South and the Midwest. Under the direction of Duncan the group also experienced its first international engagement in Israel, 1988.

Tickets remaining for the 8 p.m. performance are $14 and $8, with a $2 discount for students, and are available now at the music center box office.

Horizons broadened by Soviet composers

Two composers from the Soviet Union will perform their works on campus Monday, March 4. Serge Pavlenko and Tatiana Sergeyeva will appear for an 8 p.m. concert in Bryan Recital Hall of the Moore Musical Arts Center.

As featured guests of the North/South Consonance, an annual new music festival at the State University of New York in Albany, the composers are scheduled for concerts in New York City, Michigan State and Florida State universities during their four-week U.S. tour.

Pavlenko has worked for several years as musical director at Yuri Lyubimov's Tagnaka Theatre in the Soviet Union. He has composed many instrumental works for orchestral and chamber ensembles. His work has been widely performed and recorded in the Soviet Union, and was described by one Soviet critic as combining "dynamism, assertiveness and structural richness with a quiet lyricism and subtle coloristic effects."

Sergeyeva has participated as a performer and composer in the Moscow and Warsaw Autumn Festivals, the New Beginnings Festival in Glasgow and the Women in Culture Festival in Heidelberg, Germany. Her works include sonatas for cello and keyboards; vocal, piano and organ music; a concerto for bassoon and string orchestra; and a symphony.

The Bowling Green performance will feature "Portraits for Flute and Piano" by Pavlenko and a piece for the piano by Sergeyeva. Works by Soviet composers Edison Denisov, Alexander Glasnunov and Alexander Knaifel also will be performed.

In addition to Sergeyeva, performers will include University music faculty members Judith Bentley, flute; Ann Corrigan, soprano; Marilyn Shrude, piano; and the Bowling Green String Quartet with Paul Makara and Vasil Beluska on violins, Korey Konkol on viola and Alan Smith on cello.

The concert is free and open to the public.

The Soviet composers' trip is being sponsored by Soros, a New York-based foundation. Their visit to Bowling Green is sponsored in part by the College of Musical Arts and the MidAmerican Center for Contemporary Music.

Nature beats surf, sun? UAO's mountainous run

To the hills, that's where the UAO Spring Break-trip is headed this year. There are 15 spaces available on the excursion, and the cost is set at $135 per person. Interested persons may sign-up in the UAO Office on the third floor of the Union. Payment is due upon registration.

Specifically, the group will be hiking the Appalachian Trail in the mountains of Tennessee and North Carolina. Craig Mack, the trip's coordinator, said that the trip will be run differently than last year. In the past, the hikers carried all their equipment for the week on their backs and set up camp along the trail each night. This time, there will be one base camp somewhere in the state park, and the group will return there most evenings, with the exception of "one or two" overnight hikes. This will allow hikers to explore more of the area, covering a greater variety of terrain, and they need not be experienced, Mack said.

The group departs Saturday, March 23, and returns to Bowling Green Sunday, March 30.

Campus celeb plays our songs (for free)

Tom Gorman: in addition to being assistant director of placement, he's also one of the campus' favorite entertainers. He appears regularly at Campus Polleyeye's, but on Friday, March 15, he'll be featured on campus in a free concert with fellow folkster Dan Hartman. The show will begin at 7 p.m. in 121 West Hall.

Gorman is one performer who really loves what he does -- both singing and songwriting; performing is one of his favorites. It also doesn't hurt that he says that he's found a home in Bowling Green. "When I'm playing in BG I don't think I could be happier playing anywhere else," he says. "I have everything I could possibly want here."

Gorman enjoys a fantastic rapport with his audience; he cares for the people who come to see him, and his genuine concern is evident. His performances are honest, and not pretentious. "I really try to be there for people...I don't try to impress anybody with what I'm doing," he says.

Joan Thomas, a student fan of Gorman's, agrees, saying, "He seems to really care about the college students; he has a very good relationship with them."

Gorman's audiences can not only relate to him as a person but also to the music he performs. His repertoire includes a wide range of cover folk tunes by greats such as Harry Chapin, Jim Croce, Dan Fogelberg and James Taylor, but he also works in a lot of the music that he has written.

"There are so many of his songs (that he plays) that I listened to while I was growing up," says student Kristen Herbst. "He has good original music, too."

That fondness for the music is shared by Gorman as well. There's just something special about folk music, he believes.

"It's very sincere music. It really speaks to something inside of people," he says. Besides, "it suits one person with a guitar."

Dan Hart, another likable folk artist, promises to have the same effect on the students. Gorman admits that he has never worked with Hart before, but "I've seen him. He's really good."

Jazz Week brings lots of brass, plenty of class

Voices, instruments combining in choir

Many BGSU students may be more familiar with the fictitious students of Spelman College, the site of NBC's college-based sitcom "Different World."

But they will become more familiar with the real college after the Spelman College Jazz Ensemble kicks off the University's 1991 Jazz Week with an 8 p.m. performance Monday, March 11.

The concert, which is free and open to the public, will be held in Kobacker Hall of the Moore Musical Arts Center.

Making a national name for itself, the ensemble is comprised of eight vocalists, two keyboardists, three saxophone players, two bass players, one guitarist and two percussionists.

Currently in the middle of a Midwest tour, the ensemble has won rave reviews at festivals such as the National Black Arts Festival in Atlanta and the Capitol City Jazz Festival in Washington, D.C.

They are under the direction of Joseph W. Jennings, who before joining the Spelman faculty was the director of music at the Atlanta Center for Black Art. He is also the co-founder of the popular recording group Life Force.

Jennings also played with musicians such as Gladys Knight, Ronnie Dyson, Clifford Jordan, The Manhattans, The Temptations and The Four Tops.

Other events during Jazz Week include free faculty and student concerts at p.m. Tuesday through Friday, March 12-15, in the Moore Musical Arts Center's Bryan Recital Hall. There will also be a High School Jazz Festival and a concert by Jon Faddis on Saturday, March 16.

The Spelman concert is being sponsored by the College of Musical Arts, the Office of Multicultural Affairs and the Office of Multicultural Activities and Programs.

Faddis considered 'trumpet royalty,' carries the flame

It began when Jon Faddis was a 10-year-old and introduced to the music of Dizzy Gillespie. Twenty-seven years later, he is now well-known throughout the world as one of jazz music's leading men. Saturday, March 16, at 8 p.m. Faddis and his trio will conclude Jazz Week by bringing their show to Kobacker Hall of the Moore Musical Arts Center.

By age 15 Faddis had appeared with Gillespie's band at the Jazz Workshop in San Francisco, and he was a member of Lionel Hampton's band at age 18. He toured widely with Hampton and appeared on a Canadian television special called "One Night Stand" with such greats as Buddy Rich, Gene Krupa, Roy Eldridge and Mel Torme. Through the show he met drummer Mel Lewis, and became a permanent fixture in the Thad Jones/Mel Lewis big band, beginning with a tour of the Soviet Union.

The seventies marked a time of solitude for Faddis, who admits that he "kind of ran away" from the touring scene. He spent his time in the studios of New York, and his distinctive sound can be heard on tracks by the Rolling Stones, Frank Sinatra, Duke Ellington, Quincy Jones, Luther Vandross, Billy Joel and many more. The sound of his horn has also appeared on the theme of the "Cosby Show" and the soundtrack of Clint Eastwood's "Bird."

During the eighties, however, Faddis returned to higher public profile once again. He became a leader of his own quartet and both a featured soloist and musical director of Dizzy Gillespie's band. In May, 1989, he starred in a state-sponsored jazz tour of Europe, performing in East Germany, Hungary, Portugal and Iceland, among other countries.

Reviews of Faddis as both a musician and a performer have been quite positive. Melody Maker stated, "We now know that we can add one more name to that line of trumpet royalty that began with King Oliver and continued through Louis Armstrong, Roy Eldridge and Dizzy Gillespie. With Jon Faddis, we are hearing the jazz traditions reborn, the flame rekindled and carried forward."

The concert is sponsored in part by the College of Musical Arts and UAO in accordance with the University's Jazz Week. Tickets, priced at $9.50, $12.50 and $15.50 with a $2.50 discount for students, go on sale Monday, March 4, at the music center box office.

Rap show scheduled

On Sunday, March 17, the 'historical poet' group X-Clan will perform in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom of the University Union 7 p.m. Sunday, March 17. Tickets are available now in the Union Foyer from 6-7:30 p.m. Monday-Thursday for $10 and $12, and at the door for $15.

The group exemplifies the "next generation in black consciousness rap." They are concerned with a message of heritage and unity, and see their music as a 'prop' to pass the word. Explains one member, Professor X: "We know who we are and we are comfortable with our existence."

BOWLING GREEN STATE UNIVERSITY GREEN Sheet

Green Sheet is published by the Bowling Green State University Office of Student Publications for students, faculty and staff.

The next issue of Green Sheet will be published March 15. It will cover events occurring March 15 through April 7. The deadline to submit information for that issue is noon Wednesday, March 13.

All events must be submitted in writing to the Green Sheet editor, 210 West Hall. There is no charge to have an item listed.

played by Mark Stringer. This relationship develops in the second act, when the couple profess their feelings for each other and state they do not want anyone else.

This honesty is tested when Clitandre's circle of men fall around her and Alceste attempts to gain Ellante's hand — unsuccessfully.

Another plot within the play is the conflict between Alceste and Oronte, played by Steve Crone. Originally, the two argue over Alceste's frankness regarding a sonnet Oronte wrote, but there is uneasiness between the two because of their dual feelings for Cellmene.

However, the truth eventually comes out concerning Cellmene's actions with the help of her "friend" Arsinoe, a well developed character played by Deana Thomas. The confrontations between the two resemble a modern day friendship of two women who are jealous of each other and cut one other down to make themselves look better.

Arsinoe also is compelled to inform Alceste of Cellmene's deceptive manner and then turns to make an attempt to win Alceste. These two women effectively use Moliere's verse style dialogue in their scenes where they bicker.

This verse dialogue, which is in rhyme, is handled well by all of the actors, but Stringer effectively uses this style with particular voice inflection, stress on various words and a varied speech rate.

Boone directs this classic into a fast-paced love story containing all of the elements found in relationships today and the characters can be compared to everyday people.

for this concert and others like it.

"It's important for us to sponsor visits by guests from other countries," Shrupe commented. "It has been difficult to plan (the concert), but well worth the effort."

Suzanne Thierey has also been prominent in arranging this event. Despite the difficulties and the seemingly constant uncertainty of putting it all together she still feels optimistic.

"It's exciting to get them here and have their music heard," according to Thierey. "It's a great opportunity for the University and the composers."

Shrupe believes cultures should communicate on a musical level in order to draw them closer together.

"I've travelled a lot and I really believe in music as the universal language," Shrupe said, "...in light of the way the world is now it's more important than ever to communicate...music is the language that speaks to all cultures."
